

Irish Petroleum Industry Association

Irish Petroleum Industry Association

The Irish Petroleum Industry Association (IPIA) is the representative body of those companies in Ireland engaged in the importation, distribution and marketing of petroleum products. Its membership represents about 95% of the oil industry in the Republic of Ireland. For the foreseeable future, about 60% of Ireland's energy requirement will come from oil – most of this being through an infrastructure of independent Irish companies.

The Role

The Chief Executive Officer is a new role in the IPIA & the successful candidate will develop & lead Ireland's most prominent trade organisation in the Irish fuel industry. The CEO will represent the interest of all stakeholders in the value chain & promote the benefits of our industry in the Irish economy.

The key responsibilities are:

- Effective strategic leadership
- Influencing industry stakeholders, including Government and legislators
- Promote best practices in Health & Safety
- Financial management and income generation
- Association management & governance
- Delivery of high quality member services and events

The Person

You will have a personal and professional demeanour that will best represent the association in its key relationships. An excellent communicator and proven networker, you will lead the growth of our membership and our engagement with and relevance to those members. Ideally you will have experience in a membership organisation, and of lobbying and public affairs.
